Archaeological evidence found in Jordan that dates around 6000 BCE. The game might have been played by ancient Nabataeans at the site of Khirbat al-Mu'ayna. The game is a form of Mancala, a family of board games played with seeds or stones in pits. It is believed to be one of the oldest board games in the world.

Historical records from the region of the Nabataeans, a nomadic Arab tribe that flourished in the region of the Middle East, particularly in the area of Petra, Jordan, suggest that the game was played there. The Nabataeans were known for their advanced irrigation systems and their trade routes, which connected the Mediterranean Sea to the Indian Ocean. The game of Mancala is thought to have been played by the Nabataeans as a form of entertainment and social interaction.

The game is a form of Mancala, a family of board games played with seeds or stones in pits. It is believed to be one of the oldest board games in the world. The game is played on a board with two rows of pits. Each player has a set of pits, and the goal is to capture more seeds than your opponent. The game is played by moving seeds from one pit to another, and capturing seeds from the opponent's pits.
